"The thing about remembering is that you don't forget," writes novelist and war veteran Tim O'Brien in The Things They Carried. Our mission at the McLean County Museum of History is to preserve, educate, and collaborate in sharing the stories of our community; this includes individual accounts and remembrances of our local heroes who have honorably served our country. As this Veterans Day approaches, the Museum is committed to amplifying their stories and the sacrifices they made on and off the battlefield.

Take, for example, Howard Humphreys, who was held in a Japanese POW camp from June 1942 until his death on April 15, 1945. Or Ella Lee Stokes (featured in this year’s Cemetery Walk), who worked at Williams-Oil-O-Matic to clean parts of military airplanes and ships. Like many other McLean County residents, Humphreys and Stokes made sacrifices during World War II and have stories to tell because of it. These stories matter. We dedicate ourselves to preserving and sharing these stories.

The Museum has overseen two World War II Memorial dedications. The first dedication was made possible by the Pearl Harbor Chapter of the American War mothers, whose members consisted of mothers of sons or daughters who served, or were currently serving in combat. The seven-foot fountain of Georgia marble, located on the east side of the Museum Square, was dedicated on October 19, 1948.

The second World War II Memorial dedication occurred on November 8, 1997, with approximately 200 in attendance, commemorating the 336 local men and women who made the ultimate sacrifice. A committee of veteran organizations, businesses, and labor and civic groups created the memorial, using the theme "Four Freedoms" to frame the structure: freedom of speech, freedom of worship, freedom from want, and freedom from fear.

O’Brien described his fellow soldiers as those who “carried all they could bear, and then some, including a silent awe for the terrible power of the things they carried.” We carry their stories forward. See Norris Porter's article on page 4 to learn more about what we have planned for the third War II Memorial reveal and rededication scheduled for November 5, 2022.

Remembering the Lost

Futures in History Camp a great time for all!

Another excellent Futures in History Camp in the books! This year 17 campers entering 4th through 6th grades learned about various careers in the field of history, including law, archaeology, art, architecture, and museum and environmental studies.

We could not have had such a fantastic experience without our community partners who helped make camp happen this year: Museum board member Mike Matejka, Renee Nestler from the Bloomington-Normal Trades and Labor Assembly, archaeologists from Fever River Research, the David Davis Mansion, Old House Society, Workbench Architects, Meltdown Creative Works, West Bloomington Revitalization Project, Illinois Art Station, Hangar Art Co., Rivian, and Sugar Grove Nature Center. Thanks also to Etology for providing nutritious and delicious lunches all week. See page 10 for a special shout out to our much appreciated program sponsors.
Renewal and Rededication

Memorials remind us of what we are grateful for; they provide a place to reckon with and be inspired by the past. They create a space to show gratitude to those they honor and connect the past, present, and future.

On October 19, 1948, the Pearl Harbor Chapter of the American War Mothers dedicated a World War II Memorial Fountain on the east side of the Museum Square to honor soldiers who gave their lives in service to our country. In 1994 the community envisioned a new memorial to surround the 1948 marker. On November 8, 1997, the new memorial was dedicated on the east side of the Museum Square with an estimated crowd of 200 in attendance. Local builders, architects, and artisans were responsible for erecting the memorial, donating 4,000 hours of work to complete it. The community contributed the funds needed to etch the 336 names of fallen military personnel in granite and accented the names with white litchichrome paint.

On November 5, 2022—the 25th anniversary of the memorial—the Museum invites the public to a 1p.m. rededication ceremony. An $80,000 investment by out-of-state donors is facilitating the refurbishment of the memorial to include — continued on page 7
The past two years have challenged the Evergreen Cemetery Walk to navigate unprecedented circumstances, including going fully remote in 2020 and pivoting to a hybrid format in 2021. These challenges forced us to reimagine the Walk and evolve it into an even better, more accessible event for all. This year we are pleased to offer the Walk entirely in person on the beautiful and historic grounds of Evergreen Memorial Cemetery, as well as online via YouTube, thanks to Broadleaf Video Production.

Without our incredible partners, none of this would be possible. Additionally, the generous support of our sponsors means that over 2,000 students, chaperones, and older adults living in senior care facilities are able to participate in the Walk free of charge.

The 2022 Evergreen Cemetery Walk will be in person on September 24-25 and October 1-2, with performances at 11 am and 2 pm each day. Individual tickets to attend the in-person event are $20 for the general public, $18 for Museum members, and $8 for children or students w/ID.

This year's Walk will feature five new voices and bring back two voices to share a new story. To learn more about this year's cast of characters and for the most up-to-date information on the walk, visit mchistory.org/learn/evergreen-cemetery-walk or contact the Education department at education@mchistory.org

Museum Welcomes New Staff

The Museum welcomes three new staff members who joined the team in June and July. Jackie Cain filled the position of registrar, Emily McCusker joined as director of youth & family education, and Maria Mears is our new director of adult education. These three bring excellent skills and experience to the Museum as well as lots of enthusiasm.

Jackie Cain grew up in Tallapoosa, Georgia and moved to Bloomington from Indianapolis, Indiana, where she recently completed a Master's degree in Museum Studies at Indiana University–Purdue University Indianapolis. When asked what most influenced her decision to join the Museum staff she responded, “The Museum's dedication to telling the stories of the people who lived in McLean County—not just stories of the objects in the collection—drew me in. I believe museum collections should be easily accessible to the communities they represent. I look forward to being a part of the team that preserves and shares these incredible objects, including digitizing our records and making them available to the public through an online database. I think the Museum has a fantastic collection and I am excited to help the public see more of it!

During her free time Jackie enjoys sewing, painting, and walking her dog, Bertie Botts.

Labor Day began with New York City workers marching unlawfully through the city streets. This display and recognition of workers' contributions spread throughout the country, and in 1891 Illinois adopted it as an official holiday. In 1894, during the fractious Pullman strike, federal legislation was signed to make Labor Day a national holiday.

McLean County first celebrated the holiday on September 7, 1891. Seven hundred workers marched up Main Street to Franklin Park, where prominent Democrat Adlai Stevenson I addressed the crowd.

The 1892 celebration set the Labor Day standard for the next 30 years. Complete with balloon ascensions, fireworks, orators, competitions, and dancing, the holiday celebration was an all-day affair. A courthouse band concert, races, and athletic competitions filled the morning. Featuring about 1,500 participants and elaborate horse-drawn floats with workers displaying their skills, the parade formed around 1 pm and marched to Miller Park. Unorganized workers, local businesses, and elected officials joined in the procession too. At Miller Park, orations were followed by gymnastics, boxing, eating contests, dancing, fireworks, and wild west shows. In 1899 the celebrants added a baseball game to the schedule and theatrical performances in 1900.

From 1901 through 1914, workers boarded special trains as the parade rotated between Bloomington, Pontiac, Peoria, and Springfield. In 1907 and 1909, the parade and all-day celebration shifted from Miller Park to Hougton's Lake (today's State Farm Park). The parade ended in 1919, replaced by an all-day picnic from 1920-1926 and a 1927 parade. Workers again marched in 1935. The contemporary parade was revived in 1977.
Today workers march from downtown Bloomington to Miller Park in a comparatively scaled-back affair that still attracts thousands to the parade route.

This year's Labor Day parade will begin at 10 am on Monday, September 5 and is sponsored by the Bloomington & Normal Trades & Labor Assembly (AFL-CIO). It will feature local union marching units, heavy construction equipment, Illinois State University's "Big Red Marching Machine," local high school bands, local organizations, elected officials, and other community members.

Labor Day orators over the years have included:
- Locally born Grand Master of the Brotherhood of Railroad Trainman, P.J. Morrissey, in 1898
- AFL treasurer and local labor leader John B. Lennon in 1898 and 1919
- AFL secretary Frank Morrison spoke to an audience of 15,000 at Miller Park in 1915
- In 1917 Chicago's "Stockyard's Angel" Mary McDowell spoke on women in the workforce
- AFL organizer William Z. Foster, who later headed the US Communist Party, in 1920
- Lillian Herstein, Chicago Teachers Union organizer, in 1934

Renewal continued — memorial to include bronze tablets with raised lettering affixed over the existing soldiers' names that are fading due to weather and time. The design will allow the granite to remain visible, pulling together the theme that runs through the 1948 memorial and the vertical base of the 1997 memorial.

Our donors connect to McLean County through Barbara Dunbar, who served as the Museum's Executive Director from 1975 to 1987. She is credited as the Museum's first "modern-day" Executive Director and transformed the Museum into a professional, nationally accredited institution. Peers and friends remember her as an organizer and self-taught museum chief who took an overcrowded, cluttered attic of community memories and brought them to light.

A bronze plaque honoring Dunbar's legacy will also be added to the interior of the Museum, near the textile collection, already named in her honor. Our donors have also pledged to match up to $25,000 in donations from the public to refurbish other historical markers in McLean County. More details will be coming this fall as the Museum reveals potential projects, estimated repair costs, and possible implementation timelines. The fund drive will formally launch at this time and extend through the end of the calendar year. For more information or to donate, contact Norris Porter, director of development, at nporter@mchistory.org or by phone at 309-827-0428.
Iseminger’s book follows a group of soldiers known as “The McLean County Regiment” from their August 1862 commissioning in Bloomington, Illinois through three years of service in the Union Army. Beginning with training and skirmishing in Missouri, they proceeded through the Battle of Prairie Grove, Arkansas, the siege of Vicksburg, Mississippi, conflicts in Louisiana, garrison duty in Brownsville, Texas, the sieges and battles of Fort Morgan and Spanish Fort in Mobile Bay, Alabama, and then on to Galveston, Texas where they mustered out of service before returning home to McLean County in August 1865.

Iseminger’s research for the book began years ago when he transcribed the letters and diaries of two of his great-grandfathers, Tubal Wile Iseminger of Heyworth and Harrison H. Clark of Randolph Station, who both served in the regiment. Over the years, Iseminger located eight more diaries, 257 letters from 22 additional soldiers, two oral histories by soldiers, and other primary resources relating to the 94th Infantry. Using these documents he penned a day-by-day account of the regiment’s journey, creating a narrative of their activities, battles and encounters, their illnesses and wounds, inclement weather, and their thoughts and observations about what they experienced. The narrative is enhanced with excerpts from letters written on corresponding days that provide additional details—a personalized account of the McLean County Regiment, written using the actual words of its members. With over 100 full-color and black-and-white illustrations, photos, and maps, the book
Maria Mears recently completed her Ph.D in American Studies at Purdue University. When asked what most influenced her decision to join the Museum staff she responded, "The Museum’s strong relationships within the community was a big draw. I want my career to be rooted in providing accessible educational opportunities outside of traditional classrooms. It is important to me to approach learning history from a collaborative perspective rather than from the top-down, and the Museum has a similar philosophy of historical interpretation. I’m looking forward to the opportunity to collaborate with others to interpret and preserve the history of this region. I’m also excited to bring back and develop more in-person and hybrid programs for adults as our department becomes fully staffed and we continue to adjust to life with COVID-19." During her free time Maria enjoys playing and watching professional tennis. She taught herself how to crochet in 2017 and is working on improving her skills. She also enjoys gardening.

Emily McCusker recently graduated from Lake Forest College with a history major and double minor in sociology/anthropology and social justice. When asked what most influenced her decision to join the Museum she answered, "I look forward to teaching history the way I wish it had been taught when I was in school. My early history education focused on memorizing names and dates. While that information is important, I think history is far more impactful when you also learn about the meaning and context of the topics. I am currently a board member for the Project XV Museum in El Paso, Illinois, which focuses on voting rights in Illinois. I am excited to act as a bridge between Project XV and the McLean County Museum of History and open the door for more programming."

During her free time, Emily enjoys reading, watching documentaries, going to concerts, and taking road trips.
The Mormon Troubles in Illinois

Join us Saturday, September 10 at 1:30 pm in the Governor Fifer Courtroom for an illustrated presentation. Dr. James Simeone, professor of political science at Illinois Wesleyan University, will explore the 1846 expulsion of Mormons from the State of Illinois. This program is a hybrid program, free and open to the public.

When members of the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints (known as Mormons) settled in Illinois in 1839, they had been persecuted for their beliefs from Ohio to Missouri. Illinoisans viewed themselves as religiously tolerant egalitarians and initially welcomed the Mormons to their state. However, the old settlers of Hancock County, who valued competitive individualism, perceived the saints’ western Illinois settlement, Nauvoo, as a theocracy with too much political power. Joseph Smith, the Mormon Prophet, had used the writ of habeas corpus multiple times to evade arrest; it was said the law could never take him. Amid escalating tensions in 1844, anti-Mormon vigilantes assassinated Joseph Smith and his brother Hyrum. Two years later the state expelled the saints. Illinois rejected the Mormons not for their religion but for their effort to create a self-governing state in Nauvoo.

Mormons put the essential aspirations of American liberal democracy to the test in Illinois. The saints’ inward group focus and their decision to live together in Nauvoo highlight the challenges of strong group consciousness and attachment to democratic governance. The Saints and the State narrates this tragic story as an epic failure of governance and shows how the conflicting demands of fairness to the Mormons and accountability to Illinois’s majority became incompatible.

James Simeone received his Ph.D. in political science from the University of Chicago. In 2022 he was named the Ben and Susan Rhodes Professor of Peace and Social Justice in political science at IWU. He is the faculty adviser to the campus Peace Garden and has been with the university since 1992. Simeone is the recipient of several awards, including most recently the Gardner Faculty Scholar from IWU in 2021. He has authored several articles appearing in academic publications such as Journal of Political Science Education, American Political Thought, and Journal of Illinois History. Simeone is also the author of Democracy and Slavery in Frontier Illinois: The Bottomland Republic (2000).

PLEASE NOTE: The capacity for this event is limited to 80 people. Face masks are recommended but not required. We will live stream this program via the Museum’s YouTube channel. For more information, please contact the Education Department at education@mchistory.org or call 309-827-0428.

The Securities and Exchange Commission has created Investor.gov, a useful resource for the investing public prepared in ordinary, nonlegal and nontechnical language. The website includes financial tools and calculators, as well as articles of general interest for investors.

The “Director’s Take” is a collection of such articles by Lori Schock, Director of the SEC’s Office of Investor Education and Advocacy. One recent rumination is “Say No Go to FOMO.” FOMO is the Fear of Missing Out, which has been the driver of certain crazes. We’ve witnessed an increase in investing fads recently. These include cryptocurrencies, meme stocks (propelled by social media), and non-fungible tokens. The SEC isn’t about to forbid investing in these sorts of things, but they are warning against getting caught up in the emotions of investing in them, in surrendering to the fear of missing out on the next big thing. “You may see your favorite athlete, entertainer or social media influencer promoting these kinds of investment opportunities. Although it’s tempting, never make a decision to invest based solely on their recommendation.”

But there are three things that everyone should not miss out on, according to Ms. Schock.

- Paying off credit cards, because the interest rate on credit card debt is typically much higher than the return on most investments.

- Saving as much as possible as early as possible to take full advantage of the miracle of compound interest.

- Grabbing free money by deferring enough in a company retirement plan, such as a 401(k) plan, to qualify for the maximum company match. If the employer has a 50% match, for example, that’s a guaranteed 50% return on investment in the first year—no ordinary investment is going to beat that.

Gossip Chair—donated by Shirley Ann Craig

This combination telephone table and chair with its convenient cubby for a phonebook, pencil, and note pad was used in the Normal, Illinois home of Warren and Joy Craig. When their daughter Shirley was attending college, they converted their attic into an apartment for her and moved the piece of furniture to the top of the stairs. Shirley recalled that by then her mother had replaced the worn seat cover with new upholstery. When Joy and Warren sold the home, Shirley kept the piece for sentimental reasons.

Gossip benches became popular and began to be installed in homes soon after the telephone was invented in 1876. The handy piece of furniture earned its unusual name because it was frequently placed in hallways and foyers where phone conversation could be private. The height of their popularity was the 1930s through 1950s.

- Promotional card, Watkins Jewelry, Normal, 1957; donated by Dennis Vogel.
- Papers relating to the State Farm career of Manuel Mendoza, late 1950s to retirement; “Corn On the Curb” community project papers, circa 2000; Prairie Pride Coalition materials, 2017-2021; and other items; donated by Margot Mendoza.

History Reads Book Club

Join the Museum and Bloomington Public Library on Tuesday, November 1 at 7:00 p.m. for a hybrid discussion in the Governor Fifer Courtroom at the McLean County Museum of History and online via Zoom. Trapped! The 1909 Cherry Mine Disaster by Karen Tintori will be discussed.

Inspired by a refrain of her girlhood—“Your grandfather survived the Cherry Mine disaster”—Karen Tintori began a search for her family’s role in the harrowing tragedy of 1909. She uncovered the stories of victims, survivors, widows, orphans, townspeople, firefighters, reporters, and mine owners, and wove them together to pen Trapped, a riveting account of the tragic day that would inspire America’s first worker’s compensation laws and hasten much-needed child labor reform.

Visit bit.ly/bplhistoryvirtual1122 to register for the online discussion or bit.ly/bplhistoryvirtualperson1122 to participate in person. To request a copy of the book, email reference@bloomingtonlibrary.org or contact the reference desk at Bloomington Public Library at 309-828-6093.

The Old Time music group is a laid back and diverse group of musicians that try to get together once a week. The genre of music they play is called Old Time, which is the music from the Appalachia region of the U.S. from before the time of radio and phonograph. People would play these “fiddle tunes” at house parties and square dances. Some of the tunes originally come from Scotland and Ireland. There are pockets of Old Time players all over the U.S. and Canada. The music is mostly unwritten and learned and played by ear. They welcome any instrument to come and play, but the group is primarily composed of fiddle, guitar, mandolin, and banjo. All are welcome to come and play with them or just come and listen!

Summer Interns

Without our dedicated volunteers and interns, the Museum wouldn't be what it is today. This summer’s interns provided outstanding services to the Museum in the library, archives, and collections departments and did fantastic work.

Alex Silverman is an Illinois State University history graduate student from South Carolina. Working under the supervision of Susan Hartzold, he has used a wide variety of primary resources to gather and record data about individuals, businesses, and organizations associated with objects in our collections to properly interpret them. He has also used this data in combination with his writing skills to develop interpretive labels to go with each of the associated objects. Alex’s work will provide key information to be used for future exhibits, educational programs, and online resources. We are pleased that he will be doing a second internship this fall, diving deeper into the inner workings of collections, under the supervision of our new registrar, Jackie Cain.

A graduate student at Indiana University Purdue University Indianapolis, Samantha “Sam” Liska has served as our archives intern under the supervision of Bill Kemp and George Perkins. Sam’s project focused on writing, editing, and organizing finding aids for the Brokaw and Mennonite School of Nursing collection. She has also learned how to encapsulate documents, a process that preserves historical documents by protecting them during handling and storage. Sam’s work will make these resources accessible to researchers, educators, and members of the community.

Morgan Bueza is an ISU history major from Southern Illinois doing the important research needed to complete an application nominating Miller Park to the National Register of Historic Places. Her work included providing a detailed current and historical description of the park and how it has maintained its historical integrity. Under the supervision of Greg Koos, Morgan will continue this project into a second internship this fall with the goal of submitting the application to the federal level. Her work will contribute to increased community awareness about local history as well as the value of cultural resources.
We were hoping the previous mystery photo proved a tad easier compared to some of the tough ones of recent past. And for once we were right! Ha. Quite a few of you spotted developer Sam Holder’s model solar home, once located at the corner of Hershey Road and Rainbow Way in Bloomington. The home was finished in late 1979 and put up for public auction in the spring of 1980. The prototype home was later razed, and today a more traditional residence occupies the lot.

Those who knew something of this story—and some who knew a whole lot more!—include Roger and Carol Elliott, Gary Fillingham, Kathy Gossard, David A. Hall, David Hiltabrand, Margaret and Chuck Hollowell, David Kraft, Susie Sears, and Michael Sublett. If we forgot anyone, it’s Librarian Bill Kemp’s fault!
